

Become a Lore Master with MageQuill!

At its core, Lore is a blueprint of sorts, and can take (m)any form(s); it could be a book listing magical creatures occupying the Harry Potter universe (read: Fantastic Beats and Where to Find Them), or a nuanced layout for a tabletop role-playing game (read: Dungeons & Dragons).

Today, the storytelling space and IT are inching closer. The gaming world presents an excellent example of how technology can breathe new life into stories and characters.

We, at MageQuill, have decided to toe the thin line between IT and Creativity – bringing to you the MageQuill Lore Competition!

An idea is all you need and all we ask for. Give us a descriptive write-up of your very own language-system, or pen down a simple listicle of things that can and cannot exist in your universe; if you have a world in your head waiting to be realized, we are here to listen.

The winning lore will be developed into a game. Not only this, we have also teamed up with Rocket Trailers to get other shortlisted entries their very own book trailers and feature posters! Even more treasures lie in wait, like an all-expenses paid trip to the Scottish Highlands to discuss a book deal with us! We will be announcing and giving out prizes throughout the course of the competition on our Facebook page, Twitter handle, and website.

You can write directly on the platform – and as and when you are ready to share your words, keep assigning them to the classroom to post on the wall. Until then, your writing is only visible to you. You can share as much and as little you want, and at any given point in your writing-process. Other readers can then like and comment on your posts, and help move them forward in the queue. These reviews and likes will determine a shortlist of stories and prizes, and a specialized panel will judge a winning story. The panel's decision will be final and irrevocable.

The competition runs from March 1 to end of June 2018.
